STRATEGY AFTER COUP D'ÉTAT

Group 2

KILLER ASSUMPTIONS

1

Government policies continue to support sustainable development initiatives

Conditions to fullfill it :

- The new government is still interested in our projet and sustainability
- Can we be sure that the funds won’t be captured by the government
  - If not => stop

2

Market demand for recyclables remains stable

Conditions to fullfill it :

- The private investments are not collapsing
  - If yes, is there be some public demand for recyclables ?
  - If not => stop

3

Communities remain engaged and cooperative

- What are the socio economic changes ?
  - work conditions, liberty of movement, discrimination, etc
- Are people still interested in our project?
  - If not, is it possible to encourage them?
    - if not => stop

4

Garantee of team and infrastructure security

- Can we garantee to workers they will be safe?
- Can we garantee that our infrastructure won’t be destroyed / stolen ?
  - If not => stop

Strategy to Implement the Project Despite Political Instability

1. Local Level Implementation

- Focus on municipal partners (CMB, neighbourhood leaders).
- Limit dependence on national-level political institutions.

2. Strong NGO & Community Leadership

- Work through local NGOs (Tiniguena, ADPP-GB).
- Empower community groups, cooperatives, women & youth.

3. Community Structures

Create waste cooperatives & neighbourhood committees that keep working regardless of political shifts.

4. Flexible Implementation Plan

- Adjust timelines during disruptions.
- Prioritize activities that can continue under any circumstance (clean-ups, training, recycling).

5. Non-Political, Technical Focus

Frame the project around environment, health, and sanitation, not politics.
